Inform pupils, particularly those from nonacademic family backgrounds, about university education and encourage them to consider pursuing a degree.

Support first-generation university students in managing their studies and securing educational financing, while building a strong peer network.

THE CONCEPT OF "ARBEITERKIND"

The term "Arbeiterkind" (literally "working-class child") is memorable and concise. It deliberately includes children of self-employed parents, technicians, office employees, etc.

Decisive criterion: Is there an established academic tradition within the immediate family?

Pupils and students from families without higher education experience rely significantly on people outside their family unit taking an active interest in their educational journey. They need mentors to accompany, support, and encourage them to unlock their full academic potential.
